BELFAST, May 6 (AP) - Convicted Insh nationalist guerrillas in the Maze prison vowed Wednesday that hunger strikes would continue until Britain yielded to the demands for which IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands died - which amounts to poliocal prisoner status

The pledge came in a statement from the 440 Irish nationalist guerrillas in the prison, 12 miles (20 kms) from here, as a steady stream of mourners filed past Sands' coffin in his family's home in Belfast's Twinbrook district.

Apart from sporadic stone-throwing by Roman Catholic youths, Belfast was by early afternoon at its quietest since Sands, a gunman of the outlawed Irish Republican Army and recently-elected Member of the British Parliament, died in the Maze early Tuesday on the 66th day of his hunger strike.

In a statement issued by the Republican press office, Sands fellow prisoners said Britain would never "rob of us our principles." "There are many Bobby Sands in these blocks and we will continue to die on huoger strike if needs be to safeguard those principles," the statement said.

It was not immediately clear, however, whether the Maze prisoners intended to carry out a threat of a mass hunger strike announced on Tuesday by Sinn Fein, political froot for the outlawed IRA.

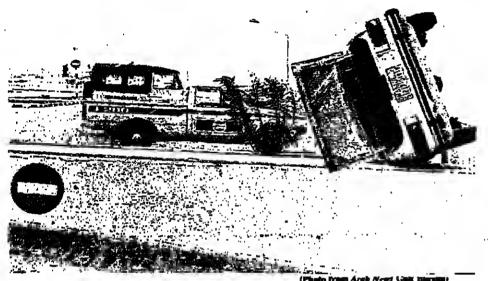

Sinn Fein said Tuesday that 70 Maze prisoners were prepared to join a hunger strike, but no final decision had yet been made.

Three other guerrillas are already on hunger strike, including Francis Hughes, once the IRA's most waoted gunman, now in the 53rd day of his fast and said by relatives to be within days of death.

Two other guerrillas, Raymond McCreesh and Pat O'Hara, joined the hunger strike March. 22. In their statement, smuggled out of the Maze, the prisoners described Sands as a "lasting inspiration to those who struggle for justice."

"No one, not even (British Prime Minister) Maggie Thatcher can justifiably dishonor Bobby Sands hy rohbing him of his political identity for he died as he lived, a republican political prisoner," the statement said.

In London, 11 opposition Labor Party members of the 635-seat House of Commons broke with their party's support for Thateher's refusal to yield.

Arafat briefs leaders of Gulf Syrian forces hold maneuvers

MANAMA, May 6 (Ageocies) - Palestine Liberation Organizatioo Chairman Yasser Arafat arrived in Bahrain Wednesday and explained the Syrian-Israeli conflict to the leaders here, officials said. Arafat was received on arrival by Foreign Minister Sheikh Muhammad Bin Mubarak Al Khalifa. He briefed officials on the warlike atmosphere between the Syrian peacekeeping forces in Lebanon and Israel. He also told them about Israel's attacks on Palestinians and Lebanese targets in southern Lebanon. Earlier in the day, Arafat conferred with Kowait ruler Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah and later with Crown Prince Sheikh Saad Abdullah on the same subjects.

In Riyadh Tuesday Arafat warned that Israeli aggression against Lebanese-Palestinian forces and the Arab Deterrent Force (ADF) is in danger of provoking a Syrian-Palestinian military confrontation with Israel. He also examined with (Syrian) President Hafez Assad various ways of dealing with the deterioration in the Lebanese situation, he said.

Meanwhile, Syria staged large-scale war maneuvers on Syrian territory Wednesday as Israeli jets crashed the sound barrier over Syria's newly installed ground-to-air missile position in Lebanon. The sabre-rattling proceded the arrival in the Middle East of U.S. and Soviet special envoys seeking to calm the crisis and raised fears of a Syrian-Israeli military showdown.

Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister Georgy Korniyenkov arrived at Damascus International Airport at mid-afternoon and was met by his Syrian counterpart, Nasser Qaddour. "I have come here to exchange views with my colleagues at the Syrian foreign ministry on various issues of interest to our two friendly nations," he said upon arrival. Syria is linked to the Soviet Union by a friendship treaty that calls for urgent consultations in the event either country is attacked. Lebanese and Syrian officials expressed opomism Tuesday after Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam and Lebanese leaders held a second round of talks here on the fighting in Lebanon. Although no concrete proposals to resolve the crisis have come out, some new developments occurred. Khaddam was to return to Beirut for another meeting "Saturday at the latest," well-informed sources said. And U.S. President Ronald Reagan's special Middle East envoy, former Assistant Secretary of State for Middle East affairs Philip Habib, was expected later in the week on a peace mission. He was also to visit Syria and Israel. Khaddam said of Habih's mission: American emissaries will be welcome in Syria if they want to see and hear reality" but "If they were to come and see things from the Israeli viewpoint only, it would oot be a useful thing either for the United States or the region." Khaddam called on the United States to pressure Israel to stop dropping tons of bombs on south Lebanon," on the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples." The Syrian state radio said President Hafez Assad had ordered the war maneuvers involving "ooe of our fighting mechanized formations, to attain a high degree of battle preparedness. It did not specify the size of the operation, but said all forms of land forces had taken part. The radio said the units had scored direct hits on designated targets, had mounted a counter-offensive against enemy positions and had occupied targets deep behind 'enemy defenses. Low-flying Israeli jets made several sonie flights over commando-controlled towns in southern Lebanon at mid-morning and over the western fringes of the Bekaa Valley, shattering window glass io several buildings in Sidon aod Tyre, Lehanon's southern Mediterranean ports, Associated Press Sidon eporter Nabih Basho said by telephooe.

TEL AVIV, May 6 (Agencies) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin said in an interview published Wednesday that his bitter attack on West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt was thought out in advance and was not a slip of the tongue, Responding to criticism of his harshly-worded attack, Begin told the daily Maarin; "There are times when diplomacy is a sin and clear, frank words are called for."

Begin has accused Schmidt and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of being greedy in their quest for cheap oil and Arab markets for their weapons industries. The attack brought German-Israeli relations to their lowest point in 30 years. But Begin has oearly concealed his contempt for modern Germany and in the interview was quoted as saving: Greed, I repeat, nothing else interests them, Begin said he was aware that "there was a great ooise" in Germany over his remarks. "So what? let them make noise," he was quoted as saying.

It was the second session of formal talks between the two leaders, after the first that was held Tuesday night after Kreisky's arrival.

The first round of official talks hegan Tuesday night between King Khaled and Kreisky. The Kingdom's side included Crown Prince Fahd; Prince Abdullah; Defense and Aviation Minister Prince Sultan: Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al Faisal; King Khaled's special adviser Dr. Rashad Pharaon; and Planning Minister Hisham Nazer.

Kreisky said Wednesday there would be no fair solution to the Middle East conflict unless a fair solution to the Palestine issue is achieved. In a statement to his accompanying media delegation, Kreisky pointed out he had told PLO executive committee, chairman, Yasser Arafat this fact during their meeting Tuesday.

Kreisky hailed the role played by the King-dom on the international scene and its sound and wise policy toward the international causes particularly would oil policy.

In his meeting with Austrian businessmen in Saudi Arabia Tuesday Dr. Kreisky urged them to do their best and work harder with the Saudi businessmen and financial institutions in order to go ahead with the desirable cooperation sought by the two friendly governments.

Kreisky said he was carrying no fresh plans or initiative for a Mideast settlement. But his

AWACS no threat to Israel

WASHINGTON, May 6 (AP) - U.S. President Ronald Reagan's nominee to be U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia has said that sophisticated Saudi Arahian radar planes would be no practical threat to Israel because Israeli jets could simply shoot them

"It would be a one-time, one-way mis-sion," if a Saudi AWACS radar plane ever tried to get close enough to spy on Israel, the nominee Robert Neumann, said. He told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that a squadron of Israeli jet fighters could get within missile range of one of the slow-flying AWACS in 15 minutes and shoot it down.

Israel and congressional opponents claim the AWACS radar command post could be used to spy on Israeli defenses and possibly coordinate an Arab attack against Israel. But Neumann said Saudi Arabian AWACS -Airborne Warning and Command System will not have the equipment needed to coordinate an attack.

He said the sophisticated plane is to be sold to the Kingdom so it can protect oil fields too far away to spy on Israel at the same time. Neumann made those comments in defending point by point President Reagan's decision to sell five AWACS to the Kingdom, plus missiles and long range fuel tanks to enhance 62 Saudi Arabian F-15 jet fighters on order.

"Senator, I can't give you a written insur-ance policy," he told U.S. Sen. Rudy Bosohwitz, chairman of the Senate Mideast subcommittee.

On another subject, Neumann said he personally believes Israel and Arab couotries may turn to a new approach on Middle East peace negotiadons "before the summer is over." He said he believes the approach, suggested by two Israeli writers, will be to try to find a way to set overall goals for a Middle Easi peace rather than hope step-hy-step agreements will eventually lead to peace.

He said he believes Arabs must know how much Palestinian autonomy can be achieved on Jordan's West Bank, for example, and Israelis must be assured security against surrounding Arab countries. Then, he said, the two sides "can work backwards" and negotiate specific ways to achieve the agreed-upon goals.

Haig's performance at NATO meeting lauded

WASHINGTON, May 6 (API - President Ronald Reagan welcomed Wednesday Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., saying he returns " in triumph from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's meeting in Rome. In a brief session posing for the cameras on the porch outside the Oval Office, Reagan called it " a most successful meeting in a situation that could have been critical for us and our allies." " Thanks to Haig, we have better relationship with our NATO allies now, we solved many points of differences that might have existed there. He erased their worries about our relationship with the Soviet Union."

Yemen aide denies swing to Soviets

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, May 6 - The forthcoming visit of the president of the Yemen Arab Republic, Ali Abdullah Saleh, to the Soviet Union will seek to strengthen the bilateral relations and will in no way mean that Yemen will fall under the "Eastern umhrella."

Speaking to Al Jezirah newspaper Wednesday Yemen Foreign Minister Ali Lutf Al Thawar said his country rejected any attempt or suggestions to rally to either the eastern or the western umbrellas. He said the visit will bolster economic and technical cooperation and nothing more, since his country firmly believed in keeping away from superpower rivalries and enlanglements.

Al Thawar who visited the Kingdom earlier this year to attend the meeting of the Saudi Arabian-Yemeni coordination council said relations with Saudi Arabia were excellent and that the council was the ideal medium for further cooperation.

The council, which meets periodically either in the Kingdom or in Yemen, reviews economic aid to Yemen in cash and in kind and takes stock of the projects already carricd out or under construction in Yemen. Saudi Arabia also provides cash budgetary aid to that country.

This year's total amounted to nearly SRI billion in cash and project financing. He emphasized the importance of the council and the determination of both sides to enhance its work and objectives in the interest of

Australians seek investments Houston Bureau

HOUSTON, May 6 - Negotiations are continuing for investment of Saudi Arabian funds in Australia via Australian banks. This follows an Australian banking mission to Saudi Arabia in March under the auspices of the Australian Banking Association. Saudi Arabian officials put forward a plan for a joint investment trust made up of a consortium of banks from both countries. A similar proposal was put by bankers in Bahrain. According to Australian officials, the negotiations are still in the "early stages". In other developments, Saudi Arabia's policy on oil prices appears to have pulled the rug from under massive development plans for synthetic fuels. The largest of these is a $11.5 billion projects for shale oil, while another is based on the

In emerging societies the woman's role remains limited since she is considered to have a restricted ability to hear responsibilities. I fail to understand how this impression has been created — depriving the society of a large portion of human resources.

A question sometimes arises whether the emerging societies are unable to assess the woman's efforts and to exploit her latent energies, or is it backwardness that makes those societies look toward these matters from a different angle? Under the umhrella of higher values and morals I think the woman can offer an active and fruitful participation. Her behavior and attitude will be guided hy morals which will tend to lead her to deal more confidently with all those she comes in contact with. Within the framework of sublime values she can easily avoid lapses and errors.

I feel we need to prepare a generation that develops confidence in woman as much as self-confidence. It is my helief that there can be nothing more significant than a proper uphringing on how to deal with others without allowing oneself to become the victim of any pltfall. And such an uphringing is easily possible in the Islamie society which has solid norms and principles and gives protection

The special envoy for the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), was speaking at the end of a three-day visit, during which he inspected some U.N.-hacked projects and held discussions with Kenyan President Daniel Arap Moi.

Prince Talal told a press conference that Saudi Arahia had sacrificed billions of dollars hy holding down its oil prices below those of some other producing countries.

Prince Talal was involved in the formation last month of a Gulf Arah Development Foundation for the U.N. It will provide support for UNICEF and other U.N. organizations concerned with human resources, he said.

Japanese ship sinking

U.S. explains delay in reporting mishap

WASHINGTON, May 6 (Agencies) -The Reagan administration has told Japan that the U.S. Navy delayed reporting a nuclear submarine's collision with a Japanese freighter because it was unaware the ship had sunk. A preliminary report, given to Japanese leaders visiting New York on the eve of talks in Washington with President Ronald Reagan, blamed U.S. naval authorities in Tokyo for waiting more than a day to inform the Japanese government.

While clearing officers and crew of the nuclear submarine George Washington of any wrongdoing after the collision on April 9 in the East China Sea with the freighter Nisho Maru, it said the submarine's skipper Comdr. Robert Woehl, has been replaced to allow him to take part in the continuing official inquest. A spokesman for Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, who opens talks with Reagan Thursday, bad no immediate comment on the report.

The collision between the nuclearpowered, missile-firing submarine and the 2,350-ton Japanese freighter became a major issue in Japan and Suzuki bas demanded a report. The U.S. Navy already has accepted liability for the collision, which left the captain and a crewman of the freighter missing and presumed dead. Thirteen other crewmen were picked up by a Japanese destroyer many hours after the collision, which occurred about 110 miles of the southern tip of Japan in what the navy said was foul weather.

The preliminary report, made public by the Pentagon, disclosed that sonar equipment aboard the submerged George Washington detected the Japanese freighter before the collision.

The sonar operator notified the watch officer on the bridge of the submarine but, for some reason, that officer did not acknowledge the report. The navy report avoids any judgments of possible blame.

The George Washington, which was slightly damaged in the collision, sailed from Guam under a new skipper early Tuesday, navy officials said. The preliminary investigative report essentially repeated what the navy said shortly after the collision was made public -that Woehl,"did not note any signs that the ship was in distress" when he observed the Nisho Maru¹ through his periscope while on the surface and while submerging. . The Geo rge Washington surfaced right after the collision, the report said, but the captain brought it back down to periscope depth immediately after determining that there was no significant damage to the sub.

"In the three-to-five minutes before Nisho Mau went of sight in the deteriorating visibility at a distance of about 1,250 yards, be did not note any signs that the ship was in distress," the report said. "He even observed a man standing stationary on the starboard wing of the bridge, looking toward the submarine. He saw no signs of panic or disrupnon.

Based on bis brief observations and his evaluation of the "pbysical jolt experienced aboard George Washington, ' Woehl concluded the Japanese freighter "Had not been seriously damaged." The report said that the captain withdrew the submarine to a point about eight miles from the scene of the crash and transmitted his first report "to a higher authority" about an hour and 27 minutes after the collision.

GENEVA RECEPTION: Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is received by various diplomatic corps on ber arrival in Geneva Wedoesday. Mrs. Gandhi later addressed the 156-nation World Health Assembly.

In Third World Indira calls for health care

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 6 (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in an address Wednesday to the 156-nation World Health Assembly, called for a "health revolution in developing countries" and urged specific international programs to confront leprosy, childhood blindness and excessive population growth.

Mrs. Gandhi, in addition, pointedly denied ber government ever "practiced forcible sterilization as a matter of policy' and declared that inaccurate reporting and "baseless propaganda" about birth control measures caosed incalculable harm to India's family planning programs.

The 63-year-old prime minister said ber government was "disturbed" by what she termed "an alarming increase" in India's population measured by a recent census, the results of which some experts have interpreted as evidence of failure of the country's family planning programs.

However, Mrs. Gandhi said, "it is small satisfaction to know that some of this (increase) is due to people living longer and not to a higher birthrate. In fact, our family planning programs are estimated to have prevented 29 million births in the last decade."The census placed India's population at 683.8 million.

Mrs. Gandhi told delegates to the World Health Organization's annual assembly that a bealth revolution in developing countries is vital "not only to wipe out diseases and make available specialized treatment" but to provide as well basic health care.

Indians fear evacuation NEW DELHI, May 6 (AP) - Villagers in nine hamlets in India's northwestern state of Raiasthan fear evacuation because they helieve that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government will soon explode a second nuclear device in their area, the "Indian Express" newspaper reported Tuesday.

However, Rahul Bedi, the reporter who visited the Pokharan area where India exploded its first atomic device in 1974, said in his report that evidence to back the fears of the villagers was "nebulous."

Gokul Das, a deputy headman at Loharki village, three kms from the sile of the 1974 blast, told Bedi that he had received official word on March 10 for a meeting with eight neighboring settlements to consider the cvacuation of the settlements. But the meeting was not held and no dates were fixed for the proposed evacuation. Das was quoted as say-

However, Das added that local authorities have built barbed wire fences hemming in about 24 square kms around the blast site. The Indian army also uses the place as a firing range for testing artillery and tanks. Village leaders from Pokharan say that authorities bave banned naoves from visiting the enclosed area and that shepherds who have taken their sheep to graze there have been threatened by army pairots.

A local government official told Bedi that he had "heard talk of an impending explosion" but had no official information about the reported evacuations. Pokharan in the Thar desert is located about 550 kms south west of New Delhi.

In an unrelated development, a top official of the northern Indian state of Bihar announced here Tuesday that his government will levy special "punitive 'axes" on villages where sectarian trouble occurs.

Chief Minister Jagannath Mishra Iold reporters that bis administration has identified nine such villages and a tax of about $1.250 would be imposed on each settlement. Scores of people have died in five days of clashes in Biharsharif township and 20 villages in Bihar, reports from the area say. Mrs. Gandhi visited the town Monday and met with riot victims on the eve of a trip abroad. She ordered local authorities to deploy the entire government machinery to end the violence.

Kosovo party chief resigns

BELGRADE, May 6 (R) - The resignation of the Communist Party chief in the southem Yugoslav province of Kosovo appears to be the start of a party purge following Albanian nationalist riots there last month, informed sources said Wednesday.

Mahmut Bakali, 49, resigned at a provincial party committee meeting Tuesday. Many speakers called for a purge following a report criticizing the party for inefficiency and inerlia in not heading off the riots, in which at least nine persons died. Bakali said he accepted the greatest share of responsibility for the riots, which have shaken the Yugoslav federation of several historically antagonistic nanonalides.

The sources said the calls for a purge were likely to be heeded as the federal government was clearly worried by a resurgence of extremist nationalism. Nationalism has always been a cause for anxiety in Yugoslavia, even during the long rule of President Tito, the symbol of national unity until his death a year

Antagonism to the Serbian Kosovo, an overwhelmingly Albanian-populated region that is now an autonomous province within the republic of Serbia, has long been a problem.

In brain-dead woman Plastic heart pumps blood

PHILADELPHIA, May 6 (AP) - A plastic heart was implanted into the chest of a brain-dead woman and for two bours circulated blood through her body and kept kidneys, liver and lungs functioning, Temple University doctors have reported.

The unidentified patient used for the experiment had been declared neurologically dead an hour before the operation and the device did not bring her back to life. Nevertheless, the surgery, performed Sunday, was hailed as "a belpful step" in medical research that could lead to eventual use of artificial bearts in cardiac patients. possibly within a year.

"It lends itself to real-life situations," said Dr. Jacob Kolff, 42, chief of Temple's department of cardiovascular and thoracic surgery. He beaded the surgical team. The first implantation of an artificial heart was in 1969 at the Texas Heart Institute in Houston. It was placed into a dying man and kept there for a few hours until replaced by a donor's heart. The patient died 32 hours later of pneumonia. The plastic beart used at Temple consisted of two devices with four valves attached to four plastic tubes through which air was pumped and blood circulated. It was placed into the chest after the woman's own heart was removed. The powers supply, a machine, was outside the body.

We were surprised at the ease these artificial hearts could be implanted," said Kolff, whose father, Dr. Billem Kolff, has worked on an artificial beart since the mid-1950s at the University of Utah and helped develop the pneumatic pump device,

For the first five mioutes, the woman was hooked onto a lung-heart machine. The plastic heart then "took over the function of the real heart," Kolff told reporters. He said a plastic beart will be given a live patient when the power supply "can be reduced in size and weight so it can be carried in a ladies' purse."

Another important finding of the experiment "showed that artificial hearts can help preserve lungs, livers, gall bladders and other organs of brain-dead people until they can be transplanted to patients who need them," Kolff said.

The minister said the pace of negotiations bad to be quickened because "the (Greek) constitution and the forthcoming elections place an iosurmountable time limit on any possible agreement aod its ratification." The Greek constitution provides for a summer recess of parliament.

The four major and several minor U.S. military installations in Greece have been operating on a provisional basis since the previous agreement ended in 1976. Efforts to negotiate a new agreement, which bave been going on for several months, had reached a virtual deadlock over terms that Athens insisted that it had to be satisfied regarding overall Greek command of the bases and related U.S. aid.

Commenting oo his meeting in Rome with his Turkish counterpart Ilter Turkmen, Mitsotakis said both sides bad agreed on the necessity of maintaining a dialogue between Ankara and Athens.

"It serves the interests of both countries and simultaneously the interests of the alliance and even of the region," Mitsotakis said. The two countries bave been at odds over Aegean seabed and airspace rights for several years, as well as the Cyprus issue.

Taipei airdrops gifts on mainland

TAIPEI, May 6 (CNA) - The Republic of China is investing heavily in its propaganda war against the Peking regime because it has proved to be very effective, according to a reliable source." Our psywar (psychological war) efforts are paving the way for our eventual return to the mainland," said the source.

Last year the Republic of China sent one million pounds of propaganda material and relief goods to the mainland, mostly by balloons. About 80 per cent of the material to the success story of the Republic of China and the bankruptcy of Communism. Other goods included food, clothing, transistor radios and wristwatches.

The source said 3,000 Taiwan-made wristwatches were either airdropped hy highflying balloons or mailed anonymously to selected Communist cadres. Wristwatches are among the most sought-after items on the mainland, the source said.

Formerly, local Communist cadres use to warn the people not to eat the food items dropped from the balloons, alleging they were poisonous. But now the Communist cadres join the populace to pick up and treasure the goods carried to the mainland by the balloons, the source said.

The balloons are of three types - those for short-range delivery which fly at comparatively lower altitudes, those for intermediate-altitude flying which can reach central China, and high-flying balloons which can reach all parts of China. The highaltitude balloons, which can carry several hundred pounds of payload, have timing devices to blow up the balloons at pre-selected areas.

When a major earthquake hit Liyang in Kiangsu early last year, relief goods were lifted to the striken country by the balloons with timing devices, the source said.

Prospects dim for China's modernization

By Jonathan Mirsky

PEKING -Economie turnabouts in Peking continue to keep foreign investors bere guessing, but the long-range prospects for Communist China's modernization appear dim to some of the country's keenest observers. After a sequence of staggering January cancel-lations of steel and petrochemical plants which left its Japanese and West German creditors in a billion-pound lurch. China has now not only reversed that decision but applied to Tokyo for a $4 billion loan to cover the cost of the revived orders. "An incredible figure," said one authority in Tokyo, where the application has been greeted with meager enthusiasm. But the Japanese most move cautiously in an arena where neither they nor Peking know the ground.

We have absolutely no experience of this sort of thing, such cancellations, such huge compensa-tion," a Japanese industrialist said in Shangbai. He knows the details of the threatened contracts, especially of the vast Bao Shan complex, designed almost to double China's steel outpot by 1990. The scheme, if completed, is reported to be worth bet-ween $7 billion and $14 billion. If the project had been canceled, China's still uncalculated compensation costs would have shattered its economic planning. The industrialist is aware of the allegations in Peking that Japan ioveigled China into a doomed scheme. Understandably, be waves this away. 'They asked us. Now they hlame us. The fact is they ran out of money.

Nor can he take seriously Peking's other explanation that unnamed "leftists" in the Central Committee drove China on to the supposedly golden road to the Four Modernizations in agriculture, industry, defense and science, lovestment in heavy industry would bave been the key. "It was Deng Xiaoping," the Japanese says, an indictment also whispered by thoughtful Chinese. "He visited China and told us he wanted a copy of our Kimitsu steel works. We told him that to build them in Japan, where everything is available would take at least four years. But Deng wanted speed. We supplied the technology on schedule but they couldn't meet the erection timetable."

At first China jibbed at compensation, and agitated Japaoese money-men threatened to terminate existing contracts. The Japanese says: "We calculated the demage. Now they admit it was their fault. But if they woo't pay enough our government will cover the cost. That would be very shameful for Peking and no one would ever do big business with them again."

Cautious even about the latest Chinese turnaround, he added: "Cancellations and orders at the same time. It's the usual bad Chinese coordination.'

Faulty linkage between skilled Chinese technicians and their technologically innocent political bosses is a common topic bere. "Their experts are damn bright," says a European with decades of China-trading behind bim. But then one requires day-to-day decisions and - bang - a stonewall; no experience, no knowledge, no decision.

Until recently, he claims, Chinese authorities believed high technology to be public property 'They imagined a whole treasure-bouse would just open up. But theo General Electric, Westingbouse, and the rest said "money first."

visiting Saudi Arabia hardly needs introducing to the Arab public. The chancellor was the first European states man to break through the fog of bias and false propaganda with which Zionism and its allies tried to cover the historic injustice inflicted on the Palestinian people, and to seek to alleviate it. In this cause, he has had to endure a great deal of vilification and blackmail, an ordeal which did nothing but strengthen his resolve that there is no way out in the Middle East except through a solution ensuring iustice to all.

Chancellor Kreisky leads a small, neutral European nation - yet one which is foremost in cultural. scientific and technological development. In this respect. Saudi Arabia and the Arab world in general, look forward to even stronger ties of cooperation with Austria, and see in the chancellor's visit an important step in this direction.

Those ties with Saudi Arabia are already considerable. Austria's exports to Saudi Arabia last year amounted to Aus. Sc 1.2 billion while it imported to the value of Aus. Sc. 5.2 billion. This picture, however, is about to be modified, as Austria intensifies its export drive. For example, Saudi Arabia is negotiating with a semi-official Austrian company the sale of a complete steel plant — and that is only one of many of deals contemplated between the two countries.

Like his Japaoese counterpart he bolds Deng Xiaoping to blame. "He deliberately engineered what he thought would be a boum. And when be saw all those big firms in the U.S. dying to place orders be just drooled. Now he's blaming' the Cultural Revolution generation" for letting the country down. That's just a way of getting the old men at the top off the book.'

Unlike the Japanese, the European trader believes that the development of heavy industry will never pay off in China. Investors will do well, be says, to huy traditional Chinese products and to help underwrite light industrial schemes, both of which continue to be profitable. Both men regard inter-agency factionalism as a critical Chinese obstacle to development. "We can't even invite some ministries to the same banquet," says the Euro-

His examples of infighting verge on the grotesque." The metallurgy ministry blokes tried to seize all the gold in the country. The Peoples Bank said no, and squashed it. And the Canton authorities won't band over railway revenues to the central government. They say "We're autonomous. We generated this."

Poland badly frightened the Chinese, according to the European. China, too, lags behind in housing, electricity, drains and consumer goods. "They were scared of another Gdansk. These international deals drain away all the money. You can't expect the ordinary people to be patient for too long."

For the Japanese industrialist Maoism is" China's swansong." At a receot seminar, be says, some Chinese top-level managers asked himbow to avoid further cancellations. "I told them to cancel com-munism. They got very silent." (ONS)

By Michael Adams

It is just 25 years since I arrived in Cairo as Middle East correspondent for the old Manchester Guardian. (The paper dropped the Manchester when the head office was moved to London in 1959). In the sunshine of that Egyptian spring of 1956 the prospect looked an inviting one.

After three quarters of a century of thinly disguised military occupation of Egyp1, Britain was withdrawing its garrison from the Suez Canal zone. Uoder the terms of an agreement signed two years earlier with Egypt's new ruler, Gamal Abdul Nasser, the withdrawal was going ahead smoothly and the last British troops were due to leave Egypt by midsummer. After that, both sides looked forward to the opening of a new pbase in Anglo-Egyptian relations. We had oo way of knowing that the Suez crisis was just around the corner.

It is true, there were one of two clouds on the borizon. Not long before I left England, news had come that King Hussein of Jordan (who was then just 20 years old) had dismissed the British commander of the Arab Legion, the redoubtable Glubb Pasha, in response to demonstrations against Britain's attempt to draw Jordan into the Baghdad Pact. And when I broke my journey to Egypt in Cyprus, I found myself caught up in more anti-British demonstrations, provoked this time by the arrest of Archbishop Makarios and his deportation to the Seychelles.

As it turned out, these episodes provided an apt forestaste of the experiences that lay ahead of me. Within the next three years the whole of the apparently secure framework through which Britain exercised effective control of the Middle East was to crumble. But for the moment, as I settled into the genial confusion of life in Cairo, the atomosphere was outwardly friendly and there was little to disturb the assumption that Britain would continne to dictate the course of events in the Middle East. After all, it was not only in Egypt that there were British troops to reinforce the influence of the British ambassador. All over the Middle East there were bases from which the British kept a close watch on events and where they maintained what would now be called rapid deployment forces, ready to act at once against any "subversive" elements which might threaten to disturb the estabbshed order of things anywhere between the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean. There was a squadron of aircraft of the British Royal Air Force at Habbaniye in Iraq, and a British cavalry regiment at Aqaba in Jordan, Aden was still a British colony, and provided base facilities for British sea, air and grouod forces. Bahrain was the strategie center for the British-controlled defense system for the Gulf region. Through a variety of treaty arrangements, Britain enjoyed special rights and facilities in the Trucial States (now the United Arab Emirates) and in Libya.

It was this military infrastructure that buttressed Britain's position throughout the Middle East. Because of it, and whatever the local governments might say or do, it was the British representative (who might be an ambassador or a "resident" or a "political agent") whose word was decisive in the end. This was what Abdul-Nasser meant by "imperialism," this whole far-reaching pattern of political domination and the military power which supported it. He set out to destroy it (I can still hear the way in which, in his public speeches at the time, be would roll the final "r" of the word istamar-r-r and to put the peoples of the Arab world in a position to decide their own destiny.

That was 25 years ago - and how much has changed in that quarter of a century? At first sight, a great deal. There are no RAF planes in Iraq, no British cavalrymen in Jordan. The Aden base is in other hands and all those 19th century treaties which gave Britain special rights in the Gulf bave long since been forgotten. More importantly, the tremendous development of the oil industry has put into the hands of Arab governments power and influence which were undreamed of in 1956. The balance of power - or let us say of potential power - has shifted out of all recognition.

THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1981

And yet, despite these changes on the surface, it is sad to reflect bow little has changed about the underlying situation in the Arab world which Abdul-Nasser set out to overturn. Apart from imperialism, the other principal theme of his speeches right back there in 1956 was Palestine; and the way to recover it, be told his audiences, was through Arab unity, which be emphasized as the key to Arab salvation. So much has happened since then to complicate the situation in the Middle East that when one looks back at the probelms be faced, which seemed so daunting then, they seem almost simple by comparison with those of today. But two things seem to me plain.

If the Americans succeed in what seems to be their ambitioo of establishing a new "presence" in the Arab world, not unlike the old British presence which I found in existence in 1956, the Arabs will be no nearer to controlling their own destiny than they were then. And if they really want to recover any part of Palestine, they will only do so by hringing their united influence to bear on the Americans.

At present, the pro-Israeli lobby in Washington has things all its own way - because it is united and ruthless and energetic. But it has no real power either to help or to hinder the United States. The Arab lobby, if only (in the American phrase) it could "get its act together," outh to bave a tre-mendous advantage, because the Arah govern-ments bave it in their power to make or break America's Middle East policy. They have the power in their hands. The question is, do they have the perve to use it?

Letter to the editor

I read with interest the recent article in your sister publication 1 Saudi Business, and decided to write about the total lack of regard for the customer, and honesty, at many gas stations throughout Jeddah. Even if one were to stand directly in front of the pump, intently watching the liters on the pump meter, and then expertly punch the proper figures in on his calculator to find the exact total according to the grade of gas; and even if one were to round off, leaving the extra rival or rival and a half, even then, invariably, the station attendant sullenly would demand several rivals over the correct, legal total.

Sir

Recently one attendant blatantly lied about not the price - a figure be obviously derived through various intricate calculations - but rather the amount of gas pumped, when clearly, on the meter (before he flicked it back to zero) was an amount a good five liters lower.

My particular problem is the Medina Road series of stations. But I suspect this situation would exist elsewhere.

Thank you very much for your consideration Sincerely Bill Webst P.O. Box 430

Saudi Arabian Press Review

A majority of newspapers Wednesday led with the arrival of Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky on a three day official visit to Saudi Arabia, and his talks with King Khaled on bilateral relations and the Palestine issue. Meanwhile, Al Medina said in a lead story that King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd are exerting every effort to put an end to the Israeli assaults on Lebanon.

Newspapers frontpaged the arrival of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and his meeting with the King Tuesday. Al Bilad gave front-page coverage lo Korean Minister of Construction Kim Joo-nam, who, had an audience with the monarch Tuesday. In another story, Al Bilad gave prominence to Crown Prince Fahd's talks with Arafat on the Lebanese situation and the Middle East crisis. Israel's troop concentrations inside Lebanon figured prominently on the front pages of the newspapers which also highlighted Svrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam's statement in which he reportedly said that Israel's demand to pull out Syrian SAM ground-to-air missiles from Bekaa was quite ridiculous.

The main topics of discussion in the newspaper editorials Wednesday centered on Chancellor Kreisky's current visit to the Kingdom and the deteriorating security situation in Lehanon. In an editorial on Kreisky's visit, Al Riyadh noted that Israeli Prem-ier Begin has already castigated the French President and the West German Chancellor for their stands on the Palestine issue. It added that Kreisky would not be safe from Begin's slanders and critical remarks, but he has also been previously subjected to Zionist tirades, which could never make him renounce his principles. Austria has a clear understanding of the Middle East problem and is also totally convinced of the need for the establishment of an independent state for the people of Palestine. With this in view, the Austrian leader has been making serious attempts and is now meeting with the Saudi Arabian leadership to exchange views on the broad lines of any possible development for a peaceful solution to the problem, said the paper.

Al Nadwa said in an editorial that, "since we know the significance that Kreisky attaches to peace in this region, be is called upon to intensify his efforts in this direction". While the Austrian leader is expected to discuss ways and means to reinforce economic and technical cooperation with Saudi Arabia, the paper said, he would also realize the difficulties because of Israel's repeated assaults. It urged him to take a serious look at the whole situation and to make exhaustive efforts with other European leaders to find a solution to the problem. Through their honest endeavors, they would serve their own interests in the region besides helping security and stability prevail in the world, it added.

On the same subject, Al Javirah observed that Kresiky's current talks in Riyadh would reveal that Israel is being used as a tool by the superpowers to implement the division of Lebanon. Israel is continuously creating the causes for tension in the region, and this is the point by which the superpowers would try to justify their intervention in the region and the consequent division of Lebanon. Praising Kreisky's friendly stance, the paper said he is known among the leaders of the European world to be deeply concerned with the Middle East crisis and equally anxious to find a peaceful solution to the

On the other hand, Al Medina expressed concern for Lebanon, and said that the government and people of Saudi Arabia have been devoting their full attention to the critical security situation in Lebanon. The paper said that the Kingdom is aware beyond doubt that the main factor of evil and dissonsion in the region is Israel, which is exploiting secessionist Saad Haddad and his treacherous gang for the division and colonization of Lebanon. It is common knowledge that all those who are beloing the Zionist enemy bear more serious responsibilities than the enemy himself, the paper added. Referring to King Khaled's recent cable to the Reagan administration and Crown Prince Fahd's warning against further attacks by Israel, the paper said that all this concern reflects the deep sense of responsibility of the Kingdom toward that nation and its faith.

Okaz also gave due attention to the Crown Prince's description of the situation in Lebanon as very "grave and delicate". It said that the Kingdom is trying its best to avert a division of Lebanon and to bring unity among the parties concerned. It exhorted all Arabs to come up to the level of responsibility and to support Saudi Arabia's diplomatic moves toward finding a just and peaceful solution to the Middle East crisis.

Revolutionary educational venture fails in U.S.

By Ronald Clarke

LOS ANGELES, (R) - It hegan 31 months ago as part of a revolutionary American venture in education - to forcihly mix white, hlack and other ethnic groups of children in the classrooms to give them equal opportunities and a chance to know each other. Ahout 23,000 children in Los Angeles were transported to schools in outlying districts each day to create a more even racial halance in the classrooms.

Los Angeles, with its 550,000 students, was the higgest American city to integrate its school system in this way. But in the first such reversal of its kind in a U.S. city, the venture here has been halted. Students are returning to their old schools, hundreds of thousands of dollars in transport costs have been wasted and the races seem as separated as before. The people who supported integration are asking what went wrong.

"This has built the walls of segregation even higher and pulled us further apart," the only Black member of the Los Angeles School Board, Rita Walters, said. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), which this week gave up an attempt to keep 7,000 students from retu-rning to their old schools, has promised to continue its legal hattle to integrate the classrooms. But most legal experts here believe the battle is over, at least for this year.

Following the 1964 Civil Rights Act and a series of legal tussles, a fleet of buses began moving the 23,000 children across the city in September, 1978. Police cars kept watch outside schools, police helicopters hovered over bus routes and special police platoons stood

A recent report by the U.N. Economie Commission for the region had questioned the wisdom of settling nomands, IUCN noted. "Animal husbandry as practiced by the bedouins may be the best adaptation to arid land," the report said. Only a fraction of the marginal land used by nomands, could be irrigated or farmed, it said. IUCN said Herna - like reserves could help protect the Middle East's threatened relatives of domestic crops, such as wild wheat and outs, pistachio, lennl, sorghum and cotton.

hy in case of trouble. The children were forced to switch schools under what was known as the Mandatory Busing Program. Another 30,000 children, mostly from minority groups, had earlier volunteered to change schools, mostly to improve their education. The switch took place peacefully, apart from a few picketing parents. But several thousand children disappeared from the city school system in a so-called "white flight." Some parents sold their homes and moved outside the "husing" area. Others moved their children into church and private schools, which charge up to $4,000 a year to educate a child plus the cost of hooks and school uniforms. Some parents, in the early days formed home-teaching groups, often with the paid help of retired schoolteachers, to keep their children away from school.

An organization called Bustop was formed to lead the fight against forced "husing" and to put up candidates for the school board. Black and white minority group children often found their new schools in "white" areas had better facilities than their old schools. But they also discovered the huses waiting outside the schools prevented them from taking part in many after-school activities, the main time for mixing.

Distances also prevented children of different races from visiting each other's homes. In the playgrounds, children often tended to keep with those of their own race, partly because of friendships formed on the buses.

" In the integrated schools, white kids went to one side of the schoolyard and black kids went to the other, "state Senator Alan Rohb-ins, an opponent of forced " busing," said. But a group of black students in a predomin-antly " white " school who gathered round a reporter recently said they preferred their new school, despite a 45-minute hus ride twice a day.

"We had a bad drug scene in my last school. I have learned more here and I get on well the teachers and the students," a 14year-old hlack girl said. A group of white students said they wanted the black students to stay. The groups talked easily to cach other, But, last February, the California Supreme Court let stand an appeals court ruling upholding an anti-busing measure, known as proposition one, approved hy state voters in 1979. The propositions, a state constitutional amendment, required proof of intentional segregation before a mandatory " husing ' program could be ordered hy the courts.

Civil rights groups have failed so far to convince the courts here that the school board has been guilty of intentional segregation.

The school hoard which, partly through the efforts of hustop, now consists of five members opposed to "busing" and only one advocate, Miss Walters, promptly voted for the children to return to their neighborhood schools.

Seven thousand chose to return as soon as the Easter holiday ended and the remainder of the 23,000 were allowed to stay in their present schools until the school year ends in June. Children who volunteered to go to other schools are expected to remain there,

Japanese children 'growing taller'

Story behind stethoscope: Like a great many inventions, the stethoscope came about hy chance.

Before the 19th century, doctors knew that the sounds coming from the lungs and the heart had great meaning. The swish of air as it passes through the tiny bronchial tuhes may be altered, the normal heart-beat hlurred hy disease.

Doctors could only press an ear hard against a patient's chest. Then, in 1819, a physician saw a group of children playing on a woodpile. One child picked up a long piece of wood and put one end to his ear. Another child tapped the other end and the signal travelled through the beam.

He had an idea. He took a sheet of thick paper, rolled it into a cylinder, put one end against a patient's chest and listened. To his delight, he heard the heart sounds much more clearly. Before long he had made little wooden "trumpets" on a lathe and the stethoseope was on its way to its modern form.

Clue to aging: A clue to the mystery of aging may have been found hy Dr. Andrew Benson, of the Scripps Oceanographic Institute at La Jolia, California. He found that when the Pacific salmon heads inland to spawn, its pituitary gland goes haywire, sending the fish on programed rush toward death.

The salmon speeds from youth to old age in two weeks. Close study of this phenomenon could yield clues to the human aging process and dieseases that lead to heart attacks and strokes.

In NBA playoff finals leads Boston's fine rally

BOSTON, May 6 (AP) - Larry Bird, Boston's brilliant second-year forward, scored 18 points, grabbed 21 rebounds and led a fourth-quarter surge that carried the Celtics to a 98-95 victory over the Houston Rockets Tuesday night in the opening game of the National Basketball Association Championbip series.

The scond game of the best-of-seven playoff finals will be played here Thursday night before the series shifts to Houston lor games three and four Saturday and Sunday.

The Rockets, making their first appearance in the title series led lor all of the first balf and most of the second before Boston scored eight points in a row to take a 96-91 lead with 2:55 to play.

The Celtics' Robert Parish started the spurt by converting an offensive rebound. Bird hit a jumper from the left corner, M.L. Carr scored on a last break following a steal by Bird and Cedric Maxwell capped the burst with another fastbreak basket alter a rebound by Bird.

Two baskets by Tom Henderson brought the Rockets within one, 96-95, with 1:29 to go. Three times the Celtics missed shots, but each time they managed to get the rebound and maintain possession until Bird finally sank the clinching layup with 19 seconds left. Rudy Tomjanovich missed a three-point try for the Rockets in the closing seconds. It was the 14th straight victory for the Celtics over the Rockets, a streak that dates back to Dec. 12, 1978. The loss dropped Hous-Ion's record at Boston Garden to a dismal 3-31.

Parish added 16 points for the Celtics. Robert Reid was high scorer lor Houston with 27 points. Houston's all-star center, Moses Malone, was limited to 13 and was shutout in the fourth quarter.

Forward was supposed to be Houston's weakness in the matchups against the Celtics, but it was the Rockets' forwards, Billy Paultz and Reid, who scored 10 points apiece as Houston jumped to a 22-8 lead in the opening 8:08.

Three-point plays by Chris Ford and Carr helped Boston close the gap to 29-24 at the end of the first quarter, and the Celtics twice pulled within two during the second period. But a slam dunk by Maloj capped an 11-3 spurt that helped Houston maintain a 57-51 lead at balftime.

Reid had 16 points and Paultz 14 for the Rockets in the first balf, while Malone, scoreless in the first period, had eight points and 10 rebounds. Reserve guard Gerald Henderson was Boston's leading scorer at halftime with 11 points, all of them in the second quarter, while Bird bad eight points and 11 rebounds.

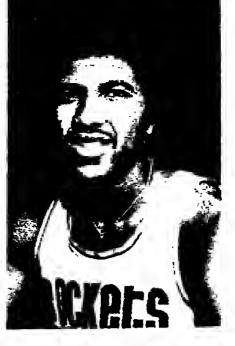

Boston went abead for the first time at 3:24 of the third quarter when Maxwell sank two free throws for a 69-68 lead. Three baskets by reserve guard Calvin Murphy, who finished with 16 points, helped Houston take a 81-76 lead into the final period.

That's when the Celtics defense stiffened. Boston allowed the Rockets just 14 points in the final period and only four in the last 5:16. That was a repeat of the brilliant defense that belped the Celtics defeat the Pbiladelphia 76ers in a seven-game series for the Eastern Conference title.

The Celtics now bave beld opponents to less than 100 points 29 times this season, winning all of those games. That included 24 during the regular season and five during the playoffs, including their last three outings. Meanwhile, two teams of American baske-

Mike Bossy sets new mark

Islanders romp into NHL final

NEW YORK, May 6 (AP) - Mike Bossy scored two power play goals in the first period Tuesday night to set a National Hockey League record for most goals in a regular season and playoff combined as the New York Islanders cruised past the New York Rangers 5-2 to sweep their semifinal Stanley Cup series four games to none.

The defending champion, Islanders also set an NHL team mark for postseason power play goals with 26, eight of them by Bossy for another record. Batch Goring's short-Ctin handed goal at 1:29 of the second period tied the league playoff mark of seven in that cate-> Bossy, the League's goal-scoring champ with 68 this season, now bas 81 goals, including the playoffs. Philadelphia's Regie Leach scored 80 - 61 in the regular season.

> The Islanders took total control of the game from the outset as they completed their embarrassment of the Rangers, 13th in the regular season standings. Top point-getters during the season, the Islanders achieved a measure of revenge for the 1979 six-game semifinal upset by the Rangers. John Tonelli victimized Rangers' goalie

Steve Baker with a 15-foot backhander 1:02 into the game. The Islanders' power play, which set an NHL record with 96 such goals during the season, elinched the victory that propelled them into the Our finals against the winners of the Calgary-Minnesota series.

With Rangers defenseman John Hughes off, Bossy fired a 25-foot wrist shot that Baker never saw. The puck zoomed over the goalie's right shoulder for Bossy's 12th goal of the playoffs,

He added his 13th 3:35 later, with Hughes off again. Early in the second period, Goring put home a backhander for a 4-0 Islanders margin.

The Rangers then mounted a spirited comeback. At 13:39 of the middle period, Ron Greschner knocked a rebound of his own shot past Isles netminder Billy Smith oo a power play. The Rangers added another power play tally at 17:22 by Barry Beck. Duane Satter connected for a final Islanders goal at 10:49 of the third period.

In Bloomington, Dino Ciccarelli scored three goals and set a National Hockey League playoff record for rookies, sparking Minnesota to a 7-4 victory over Calgary.

Ciccarelli scored a pair of goals, his ninth and 10th of the playoffs, 1:12 apart in the second period to set a record for playoff goals by a rookies the old record, was set last year by teammate Steve Christoff.

The North Stars now own a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series and could wrap up their first berth in the championship round by beating the Flames Thursday night in Calgary.

The Flames had just trimmed a 3-1 deficit to 3-2 on a goal by Jamie Hislop when Ciccarelli took a pass from McCarthy and tapped in his own rebound from range at 2:44.

Moments later, Ciccarelli and McCarthy combined on a 2-on-1 break and Ciccarelli got another easy tap-in after Flames goalie Rejean Lemelin was drawn out of position.

Ciccarelli also scored Minnesota's first goal on a power play at 3:01 of the first period. Pekka Rautakallio tied the game with Calgary's first power play goal of the series at 9:26, but Christoff put the North Stars who ahead for good 2-1 on a power play at 13:18.

Bobby Smith, who assisted on three of Minnesota's goals, gave the North Stars a 3-1 cushion later in the second period when be won a faceoff in the Calgary end and Stickbandled around Lemelin at 16:32_

JAKARTA, May 6 (AFP) - Japan meets South Korea in the finals of the Marah Halim Cup Football Tournament in Medan, North Sumatra, later Wednesday after defeating Holland 3-2 while South Korea downed Thailand 3-0 on Tuesday.

Japan was pressed hard by Holland during the first half when the latter took a 1-0 lead with a powerful shot by center forward Van Lecuwen.

But the Japanese fought back in the second half with more tactful attacks and in the ninth minute outside-left Nobuyo Fujiro equalized with a stinging sbot direct into Holland's net. Holland scored another goal 11 minutes later through inside-right De Boer. However, Japan countered with another goal by Masahaki Sukaida, before Fsjijo scored the winning goal 12 minutes before the match ended.

In the previous match, South Korea beat Thailand 3-0 after leading 2-0 at half time. Thailand will meet Holland for the third and fourth places.

In West Germany, the Soviet Union beat Hamburg 3-2 in a friendly match. The Russians, who are in Germany to prepare for their World Cup European Group Three qualify-ing match against Wales in Wrexham on May 30, scored through Blochin (2) and Andreyev.

Morocco are regarded here as the best side in Africa and the Egyptians are forecasting that if they survive on Friday they will qualify for next year's finals in Spain. Although Egy-ptian coaches acknowledge local soccer does not match that in Europe, they say standards have improved in the last few seasons.

With Morocco expected to adopt defensive tatics to protect their lead, Egypt's key players will be Mahhoud Khatib, Mustapha Abdou and Ramdan Sayed.

Earlier, Fritz Buchning surprised thirdseeded Vitas Gerulaitis, the defending champion, 7-5, 7-5.

Running from sideline to sideline, from baseline to net, the bearded Brazilian gave the world's No. 2 player everything McEnroe could handle. Time and again, MeEnroe appcared to have hit a winner, only to have the 30-year-old veteran chase the ball down and keep it in play.

McEnroe won the first set, which took one

Kirmayr ran off the first three points of the tiebreaker, but McEnroe as fiesty as ever, battled back, knotting the score 3-3. Then, with Kirmayr ahead 5-4, McEnroe rifled two aces to take a 6-5 lead, his first and only lead of the tiebreaker. Kirmayr went back in front at 7-6, lost one more point; then closed out the second set by capturing the final two points and winning the tibreaker 9-7.

It still seemed as if McEnroe could and would come back. Kirmayr bad other ideas. The 5-foot-8 native of Sao Paolo broke what amounted to an insurmountable 4-1 lead. He then beld serve to go up 5-1, saw McEnroe bold serve at love, then closed out the biggest victory of bis career by holding serve, losing only two points - one of those on a double-fault.

Kirmayr qualified for this winners-only event by capturing three tournaments in the past year, all in Brazil. He is ranked 42nd in the world.

Buchning, down 5-1 in the second set, roared back, whipping bullet-fast passing sbots by the sbell-shoeked Gerulaitis, who double-faulted at break point in the 10th set and at match point.

Libya favors output cut

Yamani denies urging oil price reduction

KUWAIT, May 6 (Agencies) - The Saudi Arabian oil minister strongly denied Wedne-sday that be ever called for crude oil price reduction.

"This the fifth time that 1 deny this," Ahmed Zaki Yamani told reporters, a few hours before the nine-nation ministerial conference of the Organization of Arab Petrolcum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) got underway here. He said he bas been calling for e long-term oil production-pricing strategy to be observed by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Reporters questioned Yamani on his recent U.S. television statement which was construed as a deliberate attempt by Saudi Arabia to keep its production rates bigh with a view to pushing prices down. Yamani said his statemant was misunderstood and misin1erpreted.

Last year, Yamani presided over a special OPEC committee to hammer out a long-term atrategy for the organization's production and pricing policies. The committee at the time recommended that oil price hikes in the future be linked to inflation rates in industrialized countries. Libya objected to this, end the recommendation bas since been dormant. Seudi Arabian sources said Yamani's

6 denial did not mean that the Kingdom would encourage oil prices hikes. On the contrary, they said, Saudi Arabia wants to eliminate the current pricing disarray within OPEC and keep future hikes within a reasonable and well-studied framework. Hours before the OAPEC meet was to open here, the Libyan oil minister, Abdel

Salam Al-Zagar, complained to reporters that the conditions in oil markets were "favorable to consumers and detrimental to producers." "The OPEC-decreed ceiling price (of $41 a barrel) is too low, much lower than the cost of elternative energy sources," be said. Al-Zagar said that Libya wanted to ask OAPEC to cut beck production rates with a view to absorbing the "current two million barrel a day surplus" in oil merkets. He elso said Libya was in favor of employing oil as a weapon to pressure Israel's Western backers into playing even-handedly in the Middle East

"But any decision on that (oil weapon) score must be taken seriously and unanimously by all Arabs," Al-Zagar insisted. OAPEC hes nothing to do with oil pricing or production programming. The agenda for the Kuwait meeting includes setting up an ell-Arab engineering company to minimize reliance on foreign petroleum engineering companies, appoint judges for the OAPEC Judicial Board that arbitrates between members in the event of disagreement, and examine a report on a projected OAPEC-financed drydock in Algiers.

Oil Minister Mana Said Al-Oteibe of the United Arab Emirates (UAE) proposed on OPEC oil price freeze while e glut prevails in the world market, but came out against price

U.S. asks WHO to cut wasteful expenditure

GENEVA, May 6 (R) - The United States has called for the WorldHealth Organiza-tion (WHO) to show greater budgetary discipline end administrative efficiency.

U.S. Assistant Secretary for Health Edward N. Brandt told Tuesday the WHO annual assembly that president Ronald Reagan's administration "will strongly argue for economising steps of all kinds in WHO and in all international bodies."

The assembly, which opened its threeweek annual session Monday, is being asked to epprove e $484.3 million budget for 1982-83, e 13.3 per ceot increase over the 1980-81 two-year period.

($9 million), is part of 275 million marke of West German coonomic aid to Bangladesh for 1981.

Zia arrived in Bonn Monday for a five-day state visit. He met Tuesday with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Rainer Offergeld, minister of aid to developing countries.

During a luncheon meeting given for Zia at the Schaumburg Palace near Bonn, Schmidt pointed to some of the problems of developing countries like Bangladesh. Among the most serious problams, said Schmidt, are the oil import costs to many Third World countries and their uocurbed birth rates.

"In 1979 end 1980 the annual increase in their oll expenditure elone exceeded the entire official development aid of the Western industrial nations," said Schmidt. In quoting a statement made earlier by Zia about his country Schmidt said, "If we fail with birth control we cannot survive."

Schmidt said eid for family planning programs was among the topics discussed by during talks with Zia. The two leaders also discussed the upcoming North-South summit to be held in Mexico.

anabinews Economy.

KUWAIT, May 6 (AP) - A committee of five Arab oil ministers met here to examine an Iragi complaint about the financial and administrative position of the Arab world's largest oil tanker company, the Arab Maritime Petroleum Transport Company.

The meeting was chaired Tuesday by Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, with oil mioisters of Kuwait, Iraq, Algeria, and Libya attending. The five-man committee was set up last year during the OAPEC conference in Algiers to deal with Iraqi charges about financial and edministrative irregularities in the $1.6 billion-company. The company is an OAPEC subsidiary. It has been incurring losses since its founding seven years ago, according to Iraqi officials. But company sources said it scored profits for the first time this year.

The Iraqi complaint, contained in a memorandum to OAPEC secretariat, was believed to be demanding certain changes in the company management.

To formulate policy

U.S. seeks postponement of rich-poor talks

UNITED NATIONS, May 6 (AP) - The United States has asked that further U.N. talks on a proposed economic conference of rich and poor nations be delayed at least until late October to give the administration of U.S. President Ronald Reagan more time to formulate its policy on the subject.

The American position was spelled out Tuesday at a privete, informal meeting of the General Assembly. Assembly President Ruediger Von Wechmar of West Germany called it to determine bow soon he could usefully reconvene the still-unfinished 1980 Assembly session to take up that subject, the only one on its agenda not yet dealt with.

Pakistani Ambassador Niaz Naik, a former chairman of the developing countries' group here, told a reporter he was disappointed. He said be now did not expect the talks to start till the beginning of next year. Informed sources present at the meeting, who asked not to be identified, said the Assembly would meet informally again Wednesday to decide a date.

The informants said the "group of 77" developing countries, grown to more than 120 since its organization almost 17 years ago, reacted to the U.S. speech with "disappontment and frustration," and both Norway and Sweden said the problems involved were too serious for postponement. The sources said the European Common Market was noncommittal.

Before the Assembly began its 35th session last September, developing countries had proposed the economie conference for socalled global trade-and-aid negotiations between industrialized and developing countries be scheduled to begin in January of this year and run to next September.

The U.S. speech at Tuesday's private meeting, mede public by its U.N. mission, said the new administration was systematically reviewing its " economic relations with developing countries." "Our future decisions on global negotietions will be based on the results of this review," the statement said. " When fully developed, our policy will be constructive. practical and designed 10 achieve concrete results in economic development."

"As the administration proceeds to strengthen our domestic economy." it went on. "the U.S. will doubtless he in a better position to engage in mutually beneficial economic relarions with other countries.

THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1981

"This approach leads us to believe that the issue of global negooations should be deferred at least until the next regular session of the General Assembly and after other scheduled interventing discussions, including the economic summits in Ottawa (Canada) and Cancun (Mexico)

The Ottawa summit will be July 20-21. The Assembly's next regular session will begin September 15, but the Cancun, Mexico. summit will not take place und October 23-27. That would push the global negotiations issue back 10 about the beginning of November.

The U.S. stand on these negotiations namileled the one it took at the recently recessed U.N. conference on the law of sea, where the American delegation asked that talks on e sea-law treaty he interrupted till next fall to give the Reagan administration time to formulate a policy on the draft that has been negoti-ated over the last seven years.

Haig-Thorn talks

EEC, U.S. to step up trade consultations nation European Economic Community (EEC) and the United States have agreed here to step up their regular high-level meetings on trans-Atlantic economic issues.

U.S. Secrelary of State Alexander M. Haig met here Tuesday briefly with EEC Commission President Gaston Thorn. An EEC spokesman said afterwards the two agreed to bold a special meeting just prior to the July 20-21 economic summit of seven industrialized nations in Ottawa

High-level U.S.-EEC discussions take place twice a year. It is hoped that the quality of these discussions "can be improved by additional meetings such as the one in Ottawa." the spokesman said. He added preparations for a meeting between U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Thorn in Wahington "are in an advanced stage although no final date has yet been set." A scheduled Thorn-Reagan meeting bad to be cancelled in recent weeks becaase of the artack on Reagan's life.

Haig arrived here in the afternoon after artending a two day meeting of NATO alliance ministers in Rome. He met with Thorn and Wilbelm Haferkamp, the EEC commissioner for industrial relations, at the EEC beadoffice for about an bour. He then paid a courtesy visit on King Baudouin and met with Belgain Premier Mark Eyskens before flying back to Washington.

In brief statements to reporters after their meeting, Haig and Thorn listed the world economy, relations with the Third World and Poland among the topics they discussed. The EEC spokesman said later Thorn and Haig stressed the need to "bring world trade in balance." They said in this respect that the EEC, the U.S. and Japan "must share the

Haig stated publicly that current economic conditions "require all of us to keep a keen eye on the essentiality of free trade in interna tional commerce which bas been the life blood of the Western industrialized society in the past decade."

The issue of Japanese car exports was not broached specifically at the meeting. But the EEC spokesman said this is one area where the European community would like to see more "burden sbaring." Since the announcement that Japan will restrict its car sales to the United States this year, there has been concern at the EEC beadoffice that this might lead to an increase in the sale of Japanese cars in Europe.

Although some European countries have strict import quotas on Japanese cars, in other countries - notably Belgium and the Netherlands - more than 25 per cent of all the cars are made in Japan. "We oeed to resolve this problem together," said the spokesman.

Financial Roundup Dollar drops; riyal rates ease

By J.H. Hammond

JEDDAH, May 6 - Wednesday's European and local markets took down the value of the dollar against most major currencies. The trigger was the fall in the "Fed funds" rate in New York Tuesday night. The "Fed" rate fell from 19 1/2 per cent to 17 1/4 per cent, but at the same time the Federal Reserve Bank announced tighter restrictions on commercial banks borrowing ability from the American central bank. The "Fed" did this by raising the discount rate from 13 to 14 per cent.

Locally, rival deposits rales eased by the two per cent in most lenors to reach Monday's levels. Gold and silver fell to $476 levels Tuesday, but recovered both in New York and European bullion markets Wednesday to reach levels of $483 per ounce.

On the exchanges, the dollar slipped slightly after its "tremendous leap" Tuesday, according to London dealers. The falls, however, were not significant, but there were variations amongst different currencies. The mark gained nearly 200 points against the dollar to be quoted at 2.2580 by late afternoon after the second consecutive day of heavy intervention support by the Ger-man Bundesbank. The French frane similarly rose against the dollar to 3.36g0 levels. but the yen remained stable throughout Wednesday, not fluctuating much from 217.30 levels. The sterling was still basically weak at 7.1180 Wednesday (same level as

WASHINGTON, May 6 (AP) - The U.S. merchandise trade deficit carrowed in the first quarter of this year according to one of several ways the government computes exports and imports, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

U.S. merchandise trade, figured on a "balance of payments basis," showed a deficit of $3.7 billioo in the first three months, compared with $6 billion to the final quarter of 1980, the report said, Other, more widely auoted merchandise trade figures, released by the department last week, showed a $7.2 billion deficit in the first quarter. The new version excludes military trade and computes the cost of imports differently. Wednesday's figures showed imports rising

Eurodollar deposit rates eased after the Fed fund's move, but dollar rates are still at a premium compared to all other curreneies. Three-month deposit rate is quoted at 18 3a - 19 per cent, but this is due to technical factors of quoting for value Friday. Thursday should give a better indication of how dollar desposits have fured. Locally, rival deposit rates eased by more than two per cent, especially in the short dates. One-year JIBOR rates came at 15 1/4 per cen1 after being offered at 17 per cent Tuesday. One-year interbank bid-offer rate reached last week's average rates of 15 1/4 - 15 ¼ per cent. Week fixed funds also fell to 15 1/2 - 16 per cent after being quoted at 16 1/2 - 17 per cent the previous day. Spot riyal against the dollar reached 3.3610-15 from previous opening bighs of 3.3620-40. Market activity was reported "thin", however, by local dealers who were mostly concerned with the dollar's fortunes on the European markets

PARIS, May 6 (R) - France has ruised its equivalent to a bank rate by one per cent to protect the frane as the currency came under heavy pressure because of fear that Socialist Francois Mitterrand might win this weekend's presidential election.

The state-run bank raised its treasury bill discount rate to 13.5 per cent, a move which foreign exchange dealers said was aimed at balting the French frane's steady decline against the West German mark over the last two weeks. The rate is effectively the Bank of France's minimum lending rate (bank rate). But the measure had little immediate effect and the franc continued to weaken against the major European currencies as well as the booming dollar. The financial developments provided an intriguing backdrop to Tuesday night's 110-minute relevised debate betwcen the 64-year-old Mitterrand and President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who is seeking a second seven-year. Giscard whose own economic record since 1974 has been under heavy fire from his eritics, has argued that a Socialist victory Sunday could result in a loss of poliocal and financial confidence in France abroad.

Mitterrand has said be would nationalize a number of leading firms as wett as banks and insurance companies.

France hikes discount rate ing the rate ai which it discounts treasury bills for seven days ahead -- had been taken following several days of pressure to raise interest rates and shore up the franc.

To protect franc

Some dealers said the French currency was bound to remain weak in the final three days of trading before Sunday's voting, but others said France's relatively low interest rates were the major cause of the decline.

Bani-Sadr flays draft budget

TEHRAN, May 6 (AFP) - President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr Wednesday attacked the Iranian government's draft budget for 19g1 on the ground that it will make Iran as dependent on Western oil consuming countries and Arab oit producers as it was under the regime of the tate Shah.

Bani-Sadr, writing in the liberal daily Mizan, said that the budget, which will draw 80 per cent of its funds from oil revenue and the remainder from income tax and customs duty, "will keep tran in a vicious circle on misery and dependence."

Letter bomb to Charles spotted

LONDON, May 6 (Agencies) - A central London mail sorting office was evacuated Wednesday morning when a postal worker' spotted another letter bomb, the third within 24 bours addressed to royalty or legislators. Scotland Yard issued a general warning to prominent people to be on the lookout for suspicious packages amid fears of an Irish Republican Army (IRA) letter bomb campaign on the mainland following the death in Northern Ireland of hunger striker Bobby Sands Monday.

A letter bomb designed to maim rather than kill and addressed to Prince Charles was intercepted at London's Howick Place sorting office Tuesday night. In the early bours Wednesday, postal workers there found one addressed to senior opposition Labor Party legislator Roy Hattersley. The third bomb was found later Wednesday at a sorting office near the House of Commons. The post office disclosed initially only that it was destined for the Commons, but did not identify the addressee

Earlier, this year, letter bombs were sent to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and another Conservative Party legislator, Jill Knight, noted for speaking out against IRA violence. Scotland Yard said, however, the new devices, in brown padded envelopes and apparently from the same source, were crudely constructed and unlike the work of the IŔA.

The bombs were all defused by members of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad. Res-ponsibility for the bomb addressed to Mrs. Knight last month was elaimed by an obscure group calling itself "ERA," believed to stand for English Republican Association. But police have not traced the group or whether it has Irish links.

Said Hattersley: "I can see no pattern in this all. Prince Charles, Maggie Thatcher, Jill Knight and myself share no common thread."

Solidarity to WARSAW, May 6 (AP) - The independent union Solidarity bas won the right to its own programs on the state television and radio and will be able to run its own radio and TV studio, the Polish news agency PAP reported Wednesday.

Access to the media was one of the concessions won by the union during widespread strikes last summer in the Gdansk shipyards and elsewhere. PAP reported that as a result of talks between the union and government, Solidarity will be allowed programs during regular broadcasting time. But the programs will be subject to censorship, the agency said.

In addition, talks produced an agreement that Solidarity could have its own radio and TV studio, PAP said. Both sides agreed that the radio and TV news will carry reports on Solidarity's resolutions and declarations which have been cleared by the Solidarity press spokesman. PAP said.

If such clearance is unobtainable or unavailable, the agency said, the radio and TV will broadcast their own reports on the situation in question stating the source of the information.

Talks aimed at formally establishing Solidarity's access to other mass media will be beld Thursday, PAP said. The decision on radio and television access come about one month after Solidarity began regular publication of its weekly newspaper Solidarity.

Meanwhile, the Polish parliament Wednesday passed a bill making it legal to register an independent union of private farmers. "The rights of agriculture must be guaranteed to avert the specter of hunger," one speaker said. "Agriculture cannot any longer be treated like a hungry cow that is there to be milked.

The decision to create a legal basis for registering the farmers' union came during talks that ended a month-long sit-in at the United Peasants Party beadquarters in Bydgoszcz in northwest Poland on April 17.

Private farmers own most of Poland's agricultural land and produce about 80 per cent of its food. The independent union - which Poland's courts bad ruled could not be registered under existing law — is said to include about 800,000 of the nation's 3.5 million privoters who backed neo-Gaullist Jacques Chirac in the first round of the French presidential election appeared Wednesday to bold the key to Sunday's run-off poll. After Tuesday night's televised debate between the two remaining candidates, outgoing President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Socialist Fran-cois Mitterrand, the Communist daily L 'Humanite Wednesday repeated the party leadership's call for its supporters to back Mitterrand.

But there was no immediate reaction from Chirac, who announced reluctantly after this first-round elimination that he would vote for Giscard but refrained from recommending the same course of action to his followers. The last opinion poll issued last weekend before the legal deadline showed Mitterrand leading with 51.5 per cent of the vote to Gisoard's 48.5 per cent, but it also revealed that

The normally disciplined Communist electorate was expected to follow orders and swing in large numbers behind Mitterrand. But political analysts said the reaction of the

Good Morning

By Jihad Al Khazen

We were out for a walk, near where be lives. My British friend bas been "out East" and has some very definite ideas about it. He was saying " .. I agree, I agree, industrialization, technology, are the way-outs. But you people underestimate the difficulties on your way ... It's not simple, to acquire, the scientific mentality, no offense but ..."

"No offense" means of course that an offense was coming right up. And it came 'No offense but you're still at a stage where people believe in the evil eye and things like blue beads and." And so on and so on. "The scientific attitude, the rational mind, that's what you must build up., centuries, it took us.. Ooops. Don't look left whatever you do ..."

I looked at him with surprise., what on earth was he talking about. Then I saw, a black cat crossing the road, Bad luck, according to superstition here, in the lands of reason. He was, however, still enthusing in the same way: "Cause and effect, you see, demonstration and argument, not mere belief., that's the ticket and it isn't an easy one to acquire "

I wasn't looking at bim, only listening, I noticed his voice had trailed off and looked around again: There was this ladder on our way and he'd just made a long detour so as to avoid passing under it.

When our ways converged once more he was still at it, apparently hadn't posed for breath ".. not merely a question of schooling but confronting generations of fixed ideas about ... "We were very near his bouse by now and noticed that houses 11 and 12 led to his house number.. 12 B. No dreaded thirteen, you see. "Ab here we are," be said, "come right in.,"

Which was the moment I was waiting for. No sooner bad I entered than I got my trusty collapsible umbrella out and gave a tug - opening it without warning indoors: "Yikes !" be screamed in agony. "What's the matter with you? First you look at a black cat then you walk right under a ladder then you open an umbrella inside the bouse: Are you crazy or what ..?" "Some tea, perhaps." I said.

Labor supports Mrs. Thatcher's refusal to yield to IRA bunger strikers' demand that jailed Irish guerrillas be treated as political prisoners.

About 5,000 youths burnt a Brinish flag and shouted "Freedom for Ulster (Northern Ireland)" during a march in downtown Milan Wednesday to protest the death of Sands. Demonstrators, carrying red flags and posters reading "British out" and "Struggle for Ulster is a liberation war" set afire the flag outside the British consulate which was guarded by heavy police forces.

In Lisbon, a bomb went off early Wednesday outside the Royal British Club, damaging nearby vehicles and the British-owned building, which also houses the British-Portuguese Chamber of Commerce. A spokesman for the club said later that the explosion, which caused only minor damage, was a protest against the death of Sands.

Meanwhile, Buckingham Palace said Tuesday that Prince Charles is in touch with British diplomats in West Germany. The disclosure triggered speculation the Prince may file a suit to block publication there of suposed transcripts of his bugged phone call to his bride-to-be and Queen Elizabeth II.

British journalist Simon Regan claims he obtained transcripts of conversations taped last month by anti-royalist Australians while Charles was on a visit there. Regan says he is trying to peddle the documents.

A West German weekly magazine, Die Aktuelle, has confirmed it is considering publishing the transcripts, which supposedly contain snatches of intimate conversation between the heir to the throne and his fiancee, Lady Diana Spencer.

U.S. secretly sells F-5s to Mexico

WASHINGTON, May 6(AP) - The United States secretly sold Mexico 12 F-5 jet fighters late last year, U.S. military sources have said. These sources, who asked to remain anonymous, said there was no public announcement of the sale in deference to the wishes of the Mexican government.

Asked about reports of the sale, the Defense Department refused any official comment. Tuesday. According to sources, Congress was notified by President Jimmy Carter's administration Dee. 17 that it proposed selling Mexico 10 single-seater F-5E fighlers and two twin-seater F-5Fs, surplus spare parts, training and support services, for $115 million.

Since Congress did not block the sale within the prescribed 30 days permitted under the law for such action, the deal went through, sources said. Mexico, now bas about 70 combat planes, mostly old aircraft modified from trainers.

Before the deal for the F-5s, Mexico had bought only $21.7 million in military equipment form the United States in the previous 30 years.

Israel had received U.S. permission to try to sell its Kfir fighter to Mexico, but the Mexicans apparently preferred the F-5, a supersonic fighter which bas been sold to many countries around the world. It is much less sophisticated than other combat planes such as the F-15 - which the United States has been selling to friends and allies.

neo-Gaullist voters was not so predictable particularly after the barsh words Chirac had for Giscard earlier in the campaign.

Most neo-Gaullist members of parliament. who owe their seats partly to Giscardian votes, have already announced they will sup-port the outgoing president. This has not been the case, however, with many militants of Chirac's Rassemblement Pour la Republique (RPR) Party who retain a deep distrust of Giscard and share their leader's judgement that the results of the president's first sevenyear term were negative. The shadow of Chirae loomed large in Tuesday night's televised debate.

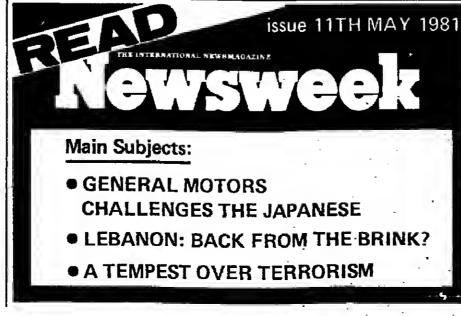

Giscard taunted his Socialist challenger, saying that if Mitterrand was elected and subsequently won a parliamentary majority, he could still be dependent on Communist support and would therefore be obliged to appoint Communist ministers. Mitterrand reported by saying that judging by Chirac's own attitude and that of his party during the campaign, Giscard could not have a majority eit-

State Alexander M. Haig, appears to be reasserting himself as the main spokesman for American foreign policy - a role that has tended to be undermined in recent months. Haig also brushed off reports of differences between him and two other top American officials, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and national security adviser Richard Allen.

A relaxed and confident Haig Tuesday told a news conference winding up a North Atlantic (NATO) Council meeting: "I think this meeting afforded me an opportunity to present to the other members of the council President Reagan's fundamental approaches to foreign policy and national security affairs." Gunmen escape with hostage aid

PARIS, May 6 (AFP) — Two armed men Wednesday staged a holdup at a gold dealers in central Paris, escaping with the aid of a hostage who was released shortly afterward. The gunmen stole an estimated 200,000 francs (about $50,000).

Their whole caper was filmed by a Belgian television team, who a chance happened to be at the scene of the crime on a corner street facing the Paris bourse. The boldup took place just before noon when the area was crowded with stockbrokers and financiers.

A young man with a gun and carrying a small suitcase told a woman employee: 'You look intelligent -- I have a bomb in this suitcase with a time device which will explode when I leave. Now pass me over all the cash you have." As the woman banded over bundles of 500-frane ($100) notes, three uniformed police walked in to carry out an inspectiou, a routine procedure since the dealers were attacked in 1974. One of the armed men took the pin out of a hand grenade and neutralized the police.
